Why should I buy climbing wall accessories?

Our climbing wall accessories help you play fun climbing games and teach in innovative ways. The climbing classroom manual is a valuable resource and very helpful guide. It has been very easy to get started with activities on the wall. Love the obstacle course with noodles and the fitness accessories.

What materials should I buy for a rock climbing wall?

OK, hopefully you have read the Indoor Rock Climbing Wall "what materials to buy" page and have everything ready to go. Tools recommended are: circular saw, drill and bits, a hammer, tape measure, pencil, socket set, painting tools and something to open a paint tin. Being in a metric country, that's the measurements I will be using. Alright, ready?

How do you make a rock face not an indoor rock climbing wall?

Then with your brush away from your person, spatter the whole shebang lightly, this gives a nice imperfect "it's a rock face not an indoor rock climbing wall" feel. Try not to have too much paint on the brush when performing this trick, big spatters of paint aren't really that rock face like. Another trick is stencilling.
